

Portland Light: Post-Industrial City Poems Photography (Paperback)

By Naomi Fast

Naomi Fast, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .The poems and photography that make up Naomi Fast's Portland Light are the product of her ten-year love affair with one of the most captivating cities of the Pacific Northwest. The book reflects Portland's light and lightnesses, therefore revealing shadow and contrast. Through black white photography and language in full color, this book seeks to please, inspire, and inform. The photos capture the edges of history, beauty, and spirit, while the poetry is inspired by life in this city. Now prized--perhaps even hyped--for its reputed environmentalism and livability, Portland is a city created by the pioneers of the 1800s, on land first inhabited by tribes of people who lived along the Willamette and Columbia rivers for centuries prior. Multnomah County, where Portland sits, is named for some of those peoples. Portland the city is both young and old. Many white Portland residents are still among those who consider themselves original native Portlanders, an arguably problematic term referring to those born in the city, including the people whose European great-great-great-great grandparents built the very first bungalows...
